Truck Farmers Here Paid $4,000 a Day for Crops

Payment In June Exceeds $68,000 So Survey Shows

Potatoes and Beans Bring Rich Returns This Month

NEW SOURCE MONEY Figures Do Not Include Champion Truck Region of Blevins

Potatoes and beans have been bringing the Hope area of Hempstead county an average of $4,000 a day for the first 17 days of June, according to a survey of local mossissions houses today noon.

This is exclusive of the rich truck farming section around Blevins and McCaskill, and includes only those truck shipments actually handled by Hope shippers.

Four Houses Report The survey was made by C. C. Spragins, cashier of the Citizens National Bank, and a representative of The Star. They called on all four local commission houses, T. S. McDavitt & Co., C. S. Lowthorp & Co., E. M. McWilliams, and Monts Seed Store.

Commission house figures indicated a total payment to local farmers of approximately $68,000 since the first of June. This is considerably ahead of the local cash condition a year ago, after making allowance for the near failure of this year's radish crop. Blevins radishes enjoyed a successful year, but local shippers reported serious defects in the Hope product, added to which there was much unseasonable weather in the North which affected the market for all Southern radishes more or less.

Cash In Circulation Local bankers point out that the sale of truck crops through the spring and summer creates an entirely new factor in favor of local merchandising, distributing a good deal of cash to the local banks and business houses at a season of the year when there was virtually no ready money under the old cotton crop system.

Twenty-five years ago the total bank deposits of Hope were only $500,000, as compared to a probable $2,750,000 at the next federal and state bank statement call.

Officer Killed, Three Wounded

Were Fired On By Alleged Rum Runners in Early Morning Chase

GOLDSBORO, N. C. June 17.—(AP)—P. L. Finchum, prohibition enforcement officer, was shot and killed and his deputy H. G. Andrews was wounded by alleged rum runners. Two other officers, D. A. Dale and M. E. Street were injured when the officers car was wrecked. The officers were from Wilson, N. C. The party of officers, while coming into Goldsboro were attracted to an automobile which they thought contained liquor. They immediately gave chase. When near the city park, Finchum, who was driving the car, drew up along side of the other car two men began firing, one of the shots taking effect in the officers head, causing him to lose control of the car. Officer Andrews was shot in the head and shoulders. The other two were injured when the car struck a tree after Finchum was shot and lost control of it. The alleged rum runners made their get away.

Nail-Picker Here To End Punctures

New State Machine Starts To Work on Local State Roads

The State of Arkansas' automatic nail-picker arrived in Hope last night and will start work today on the state highways out of this city. Equipped with powerful magnets underslung beneath a heavy truck, and only a few inches above the surface of the road, the machine cruises along gravel and concrete roads, picking up nails, tacks, wire and other metal objects which cause automobile punctures.

As much as 42 pounds of metal is picked up for each mile of road traversed, according to records of the State Highway Department. The nail-picker is about nine-feet wide, and has to make a trip in each direction in order to cover the entire road surface.

The machine is in charge of E. J. Wright, and will spend the next two weeks in the local district, under direction of District Engineer R. B. Stanford.

Orders for additional machines of this type will be made by the State Highway Department if continued tests are as successful as those this spring, it is believed.

More Funds For Flood Control

3,000 Men Expected To Be Employed By Projects Named

MEMPHIS, June 17.—(AP)—Information was received here that Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of engineers at Washington, had allotted an additional sum of nearly $3,000,000 to be expended for levee and river improvement work in the Memphis district.

The amount—2,864,000—would increase to nearly $3,000,000 the allotment for flood control work. Capt. L. C. Gordon, executive officer of the Memphis river district headquarters said. Expenditure of the amount would be distributed between Cairo, Ill., and the mouth of White river near Helena, Ark., and give employment to a minimum force of 3,000 men.

Of the additional amount appropriated, $1,500,000 would be spent for construction works in the river crebs and dikes. Contracts for this construction, involving 29,700 linear feet of pile dikes at five points in Kentucky, Missouri, Tennessee and Arkansas, have been awarded by Lieut. Col. F. B. Wilby, district engineer as follows:

Dorena landing vicinity, Missouri, 5,000 linear feet, awarded to W. P. McGeorge, Pine Bluff, Ark., at a bid price of $176,384; Island Eight vicinity, Kentucky, 5,000 linear feet to Woods Brothers Construction company of Lincoln, Neb., bid price $244,480; Toncy's Towhead vicinity, Kentucky, 6,000 linear feet to C. W. Bunter company, Memphis, Tenn., bid price, $225,372.40; Caruthersville vicinity, Tennessee, 5,300 linear feet to Badgett Construction company of Vicksburg, Miss., bid price $249,975; Ashport-Goldust vicinity, Arkansas and Tennessee, 5,222 linear feet to Woods Brothers Construction company, bid price $372,607.30.

Bids for the construction of about 6,000,000 cubic yards of levees in the lower St. Francis and upper Yazoo levee districts will be opened tomorrow. More than 4,000,000 cubic yards of the levees to be undertaken will be built in the lower St. Francis district at seven locations and about 2,000,000 cubic yards of work in the upper Yazoo district at four locations. All of this work is the construction of new levees.

Murder Charge Filed, Bruises Found On Body

Coroner's Jury Decides Victim Met Death at Defendants Hand

SAYS BOTH DRUNK

Geo. W. Davis Jailed at Ashdown as Woman Dies After Rescue

FOREMAN, Ark., June 17.—George W. Davis, 55, was in jail at Ashdown Monday night facing a first degree murder charge in connection with the death of a woman he claimed to be his wife, 54, who died at a doctor's office a short time after being dragged from an abandoned well five miles northeast of here.

Aside from claiming that his wife received injuries that resulted in her death through a fall into the well while she was intoxicated, Davis declined to make a statement. Examining trial probably will be held Tuesday or Wednesday, a coroner's jury having held to Davis to blame for her death.

The couple had been married only six weeks, wedding in Johnson City, Tenn., according to Davis. A card found in the woman's effects bore the name of 'Mary Doaks, Tulip, Arkansas.' Officers prepared to start an investigation there to determine the identity of the death victim.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Gilbert approached the old well while gathering blackberries and met Davis. They said he told them his wife had fallen in the well and commanded Gilbert to help get her out. Gilbert aided and they managed to drag the woman from the well.

Gilbert said that Davis was in a savage mood and that he left because of the latter's threatening demeanor. Gilbert reported to officers at Foreman and they went to the scene to place Davis under arrest and brought the woman to a doctor's office.

She was still alive when the party reached Foreman but died within a few minutes after arriving at the physician's office without making a statement.

A number of wounds were found on the woman's head and Davis claimed these were received when she fell in the well. He said that they had been drinking together and that his wife had walked too close to the well and fallen in. He declared that she was intoxicated.

A coroner's jury was impaneled and after an investigation, rendered a verdict that 'Mrs. Davis came to her death by the use of some deadly weapon in the hand of George W. Davis.'

Davis is not a resident of Foreman but is known here. He has two sisters living near Foreman.

Man Kills Self After 26 Day Fast

After Breaking Fast Man Desides to Eat, Then Shoots Self

DANVILLE, Va., June 17.—(AP)—Frank W. Davis, 58-year-old farmer, who recently broke a self-imposed fast which he continued for 26 days in an effort to end his life, was dead Monday from a shotgun wound through the heart. He was found dead in his cabin Sunday by neighbors. The shotgun which had stood at his bedside throughout his fast, was lying beside the body. A cord was tied to the trigger.

Authorities said it was a case of suicide. Physicians said Davis had been dead eight or 10 hours when the body was discovered. He had only recently returned to his cabin upon deciding to eat after authorities had taken steps to have him committed for observation to the Western State Hospital for the Insane.

Chicago Police Chiefs Forced Out of Office

City Council Committee and Jury to Launch Inquiry

ORDER GRAND JURY

Detective Chief Hints Officers Knew More of Lingle Murder

CHICAGO, June 17.—(P)—New brooms began to sweep Chicago Monday. Mayor William Hale Thompson's two police chiefs quit the firing line in the war on gangs and gunmen, forced out by the high tension of public indignation.

Into the breach came public and private agencies resolved to purge city hall, police and underworld of the gangsters' thrall.

The city council committee of police, hearing the reports of the two retiring commanders, Commissioner William F. Russell and Captain John Stege, detective chief, determined on a thorough investigation of the police department. Its inquiry will be launched Thursday with Aldermen Arthur F. Albert as prosecutor—Albert the city council leader, who last week demanded Mayor Thompson that Stege and Russell be removed for 60 days to allow a house cleaning.

A county grand jury was ordered to investigate by Denis J. Normoye, chief justice of the criminal court.

"When the gunmen go beyond their guerrilla warfare and attack the range of private citizens," said Judge Normoye, "it is time to curb them. Gangsters are not only a menace to this community, but a disgrace to the whole United States. The city's reputation has been injured and it is up to us to act."

Chief Justice Normoye alluded to the daylight assassination a week ago Monday of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, whose killer remains unknown although the retiring detective chief intimated as he packed his uniform and started for his new post, a captaincy at an outlying station, that the police "know more than the public suppose" about the murder.

Meanwhile, business leaders met secretly at the Association of Commerce and voted to enlarge the "Secret Six," committee investigating reign of the crime of 16 men representative of various business groups, and to increase its scope of activities and fatten its purse.

Commissioner Russell, the veteran of 30 years in the department, smiled as though relieved when he told the reporters of his resignation, but reminisced a little sadly of the vain war he had waged for two years. He had opposed the routine round up of hoboes and gangsters and gun-toters, and lost. In less than six months this year 39 men have fallen victims of gang guns; none has been avenged by an indictment, much less a court conviction.

Russell and Stege alike blamed prohibition for the situation. Russell, too, complained of an inadequate force, necessitated, he said, by the impoverished city treasury.

"I am an illustration of man's inhumanity to man," he said. "But I have met insurmountable obstacles. By that I mean prohibition and I don't care who knows it. All over the United States prohibition is responsible for all of this."

John H. Alcock, deputy commissioner, will act as commissioner until a successor to Russell is appointed, and Captain John Egan will succeed Stege temporarily.

Treasure Hunt Is Jubilee For Kids

Saenger Theatre and Local Stores Treat 565 Youngsters

The Publix-Saenger theatre's Treasure Hunt this morning was one of the most successful juvenile events in the history of Hope.

It was the first mid-week feature of the Saturday Kiddies Club, and under direction of Manager Matt Press of the theatre, a total of 565 youngsters tramped the streets of the city during the morning. They visited a dozen stores which were co-operating with the theatre and struggled for prizes that had been hidden at each place.

The streets looked like those of a convention city, all morning, as boys and girls surged to and for in the downtown district. All provisions had been made for their safety, however, and the great Treasure Hunt passed without any serious injury.

Then there was the Chicago gangster who became suspicious of the doctor who declared his baby's ailment was due to rickets.

The morning will be devoted to trips over the farm and the various experimental plots will be shown and the work explained by members of the staff. Experiments in various crops will give results of fertilizer tests, spray and dusting practices, comparison of transplanted and non-transplanted plants, rates of planting, pruning, date of planting, depth of planting, and studies in different adaption of different varieties of truck and fruit crops.

Studies in truck crops will include cantaloupes, cucumbers, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, and watermelons. Fruits will include strawberries, grapes, peaches, pears, figs, cherries, plums, apples, blackberries, raspberries, currants, gooseberries, and other small fruits.

King Carol Plans Coronation Ceremonies

BUCHARST, June 17.—(AP)—Now that Carol II has swept all obstacles from his path to a full and valid kingship of Roumania, he made plans today for an impressive coronation. It will be held at Alba Julia where the late King Ferdinand was crowned, and has been set for October. It is believed likely that October 11 will be the date, for it was on that day in 1914, that his father, King Ferdinand I, became monarch of the Balkan kingdom. King Carol intends to invite all the crowned heads and presidents of Roumanian world allies.

Tariff Measure Signed Today In Hoover's Office

Senate Critics Charge President Acted Deceptively

CURTIS SIGN MONDAY

Urges That Senate Stay in Session Until Two More Bills Passed

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(P)—President Hoover today signed the tariff bill. The new law takes effect at 1 o'clock Wednesday morning. Custom officials are rushing to ports to file their cargos in order to get the benefit of the old rate. The confusion is expected to prevail however.

The bill was signed in the presence of Secretary Mellon, Senator Eble, Commissioner of Customs and four of the six representatives of Congress. They were Senator Smoot, Utah, Senator Shortridge, Calif., Representative Hawley, Oregon, and Senator Chedway, Mass. Senators Wilson of Indiana and Barback of New Jersey were not present.

No photograph of the ceremony was taken. As the signature was fixed by the President all present applauded.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(P)—The Smoot-Hawley tariff bill passed through the White House Monday while the senate rang with democratic accusations that President Hoover took a deceptive stand in his statement of intent to sign the measure. Indications were that the pen and ink, formality of enacting the law, into law, would be merely a formality after noon today.

Vice President Curtis affixed his name Monday morning. Then the bulky document traveled from the capitol to the executive offices in the custody of Mrs. G. H. Davies, clerk of the house committee on enrolled bills.

Senator Harrison, the Mississippian, denounced the president's statement of Sunday night saying "he did not suppose there ever was a document sent out from the White House that had more misleading statements and alleged facts in it than that one issued Sunday on the Sabbath."

The six senate and house republican conferees, including Chairman Smoot of the senate finance committee, and Hawley of the house, were invited to witness the signing of the bill. Each probably will be given a pen used by Hoover in the act.

The rates take effect the day after enactment into law.

The Mississippian said Hoover, in estimating that 93 per cent of the increase went to agricultural products, had included everything except metals. Senator Harrison read the Borah speech delivered by Hoover in the 1928 campaign on the tariff and said he did not see the double dealing of the American people are getting. He contended Hoover then opposed delegation of power to the tariff commission such as is provided by the new tariff measure.

DEMAND CONGRESS WAIT BILL APPROVAL

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(P)—Demands were made in the senate Monday by both republican and democratic congress stay in session until the rivers and harbors and the veterans relief bills have been voted upon and approved or disapproved by Hoover.

Senator Robinson, the democratic leader, suggested this program after calling attention to fears of some that congress might adjourn before the president has acted upon the veterans measure, thus permitting a pocket veto.

Senator McNary, the assistant republican leader, suggested that the veterans measure be taken up immediately in order to get the legislation to the White House at an early date.

Senator Johnson, republican, California, said the rivers and harbors bill ought to be passed at once, too. He urged that no consideration be given to an adjournment resolution until both bills are acted upon by the president.

Will You Be a Victim?

APPARENTLY we Americans are not nearly as intelligent and efficient as we like to suppose.

Although we have had safety work on a national scale for a good many years, and although every newspaper and magazine has dinned into our ears the fact that automobile traffic is growing increasingly dangerous each year, our automobile traffic fatality list continues to go up.

Figures just released show that automobiles in the United States last year killed 31,000 people and injured 1,000,000 more—an increase of 10 per cent over the figures for 1928.

Ponder over those figures for a minute and let their significance soak in. Thirty-one thousand deaths! More people—many more—than were killed on both sides in the battle of Gettysburg. If some new disease were carrying people off at this rate we would call it a dreadful epidemic, and would be imploring our doctors to save us from it.

Look at it in this way: during the next hour—dating from the moment in which you read this—three Americans will be killed by automobiles and 115 will be injured.

Who will they be, these men and women who are doomed to die within the next 60 minutes? Well, one of them may be yourself. Yourself, or one of your loved ones. Or it may be that one of these victims is to be struck down by the wheels of your automobile. To be sure, you are careful—but we all think we are careful. No man ever told himself that he was eventually going to die beneath an automobile. No man ever told himself that his car would some day kill another human being.

All of this is just another way of saying that every one of us has got to be everlastingly alert, everlastingly careful. A moment's inattention while we are driving our cars may cost a life—our own, or someone else's. We do not yet know how to cope with this terrible accident situation by means of new laws; but all of us can vow to drive with such care and consideration that there will be no danger of our adding to the toll.

Independent of Nature

ONE of the interesting things about the process of industrialism is the way in which men are constantly making themselves free of natural handicaps.

An interesting example is found in the way in which private industry has taken a tip from the Navy Department and devised a form of electric power supply that is not dependent on such natural forces as a steady supply of running water.

Some months ago a severe drought hit the state of Washington and reduced the supply of hydro-electric power available for the city of Tacoma. By special arrangement with the navy, the giant aircraft carrier Lexington was run in a Tacoma dock and her turbines were used to supplement the energy of the city power plant.

This stunt worked so well that private industry has found it worth copying.

According to The Industrial Bulletin, issued by Arthur D. Little, Inc., the New England Public Service Co., which supplies power to seaboard cities in Maine and New Hampshire, has found this use of the Lexington instructive. A 700-ton cargo ship, the Jacona, has been bought and transformed into a floating power plant of 20,000 kilowatts capacity by the installation of new oil-fired boilers, two huge generators and other equipment.

The Jacona is kept available for service anywhere along the coast. Whenever an electric power famine is threatened in any coast city, whether by reason of drought or for any other cause, the Jacona is rushed to the spot. It ties up at a dock, just as the Lexington did, and cuts in on the city's high tension system, pumping out electric power until the emergency is past.

Thus a flexible power supply is assured, and the danger of a shortage is overcome. The interesting thing about it all is that it is simply one more way of making men independent of natural forces. Streams may run low, or storms may cripple power lines; nevertheless, in spite of nature's mischief, this particular territory will be able to get its regular supply of electricity, quite as though nothing had happened.

Parachute Jumper's Fate

FATE can be whimsical almost beyond belief, sometimes.

Consider the case of Henry Bushmeyer, parachute jumper.

Bushmeyer made his living by making exhibition parachute jumps. He had jumped from airplanes more than 500 times without being hurt.

The other day he went up in an airplane with a friend. It was a pleasure hop, so he did not wear a parachute. The plane crashed. A parachute would have saved his life—but he didn't have one. So Bushmeyer, who had made 500 successful leaps, was killed.

What a queer, ironic twist of fate.

Commencing to Feel the Heat!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Things look pretty bad right now, says Senator J. Boomboom McWhorter, and if the Republican party hopes to do any business in the fall elections and to get itself in position for 1932 it had better call in the services of that distinguished pioneer, Republican and patriot, Hugo N. Frye.

Probably there never was a time when the aid of such a man as Frye was so sorely needed, the senator says. And inasmuch as Vice President Curtis, Secretary of Labor Davis, Senator Joe Grundy, National Chairman Claudius Huston and other eminent G. O. P. leaders have lavished their tributes on Frye, McWhorter expects his suggestion to receive prompt and favorable attention.

Yes, They Praised Him

It will be recalled that Curtis, Huston, Davis and the others were invited to a "sequacious dinner" in Hugo's honor the other night. Hugo was described as a veteran of the Mexican War who had settled in Elmira and established the Republican party in upstate New York for "protection of property" and "freedom in the land of the free." Well, the party bigwigs reported their immense regret that they couldn't attend, but they sent fulsome eulogies of Frye to be read at the banquet.

Jim Davis said it was "a pleasure to testify to the career of that sturdy patriot who first planted the ideals of our party in this region of the country." And, "If he were living today he would be the first to rejoice in evidence everywhere present that our government is still safe in the hands of the people."

Senator McWhorter scolds reports from Utah that Hugo N. Frye has only lived in the imagination of some Cornell students. There can be little doubt, he says, that Hugo was a real person and a genuine Republican pioneer.

"Do you think that Curtis and Huston, those monumental minds, would ever have praised a mythical person so highly and have let it be thought that they knew all about Hugo N. Frye when they really never had heard of him?" demands Senator McWhorter.

"Why, such a thing would tend to make people think that they were not altogether sincere and that they didn't know much about the history of our great and glorious party. Absurd!"

Senator McWhorter possibly has more interest than anyone else in proving the actuality of Mr. Frye. He couldn't get away to the dinner, either, but he contributed several anecdotes about Frye to be read aloud, and even recalled fondly how he had learned the first tenets of Republicanism while being dandled on Mr. Frye's knee.

When it was suggested to the senator that there might be some trouble getting Mr. Frye to come and save the party because Mr. Frye was supposed to be dead, McWhorter replied that it was no easier to prove that he was dead than to prove that he was alive.

"There are all kinds of jobs in the party which Frye could do for us now," the senator explained. "Anyone who enjoys such unstinted confidence and respect from our leaders as he does could do anything."

"He might even be able to persuade Mr. Huston to resign, which is more than all the rest of the party has been able to do."

"Konjola Worked Wonders In My Stubborn Case"

Fort Worth Man Relieved of Severe Attack of Rheumatism Eagerly Praises New Medicine

MR. JOE CONNELLY

"For over a year I suffered with muscular rheumatism," said Mr. Joe B. Connelly, 504 Belknap street, Ft. Worth. "My entire body was a mass of aches and pains. Finally I was forced to give up my work and was confined to bed. The pains were so severe that I had to be moved very carefully and was helpless and bed-ridden for three months. My nerves were completely gone and I felt at times that I could not bear my suffering another day."

"I sent away for my first treatment of Konjola and was amazed at the results. Within three weeks I was able to get up and around without assistance. Gradually the pain and soreness left me and I began to feel my old self again. My nerves settled, constipation was completely banished, and I do not remember when I have felt as well as I do now. Konjola certainly worked wonders in my case."

Though Konjola works quickly, and many sufferers are greatly benefited in a week, a complete treatment of from six to eight bottles is recommended for thorough results.

Konjola is sold in Hope at Bryant's Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Adults Contract Children's Diseases

Adults can, and do, contract many children's diseases. And, usually, they suffer from them much more than children do. For instance, many adults contract worms, an ailment usually associated with children. Sometimes they suffer intensely and take expensive medical treatments, without realizing that worms are the cause of their troubles. Yet, the symptoms are the same as in children, loss of appetite and weight, grinding the teeth and restless sleep, itching of the nose and anus, and abdominal pains. And, the same medicine that surely and harmlessly expels round and pin worms from children will do the same for adults—White's Cream Vermifuge, which you can get at Ward & Son, Hope, and Crescent Drug Company, Washington. ## Farm Diversifying PAYS

Hope produce firms have been paying $4,000.00 per day for potatoes and beans to farmers of this trade territory. For the first 15 days of June this figures $60,000.00.

Hope's cheese plant paid $3,000.00 to farmers of this trade territory for their whole milk during the first 15 days of June.

Many farmers also receive semi-monthly checks for cream marketed in Hope. Thousands of dollars are being paid to our farmers for eggs and chickens.

This ready cash comes at a time when Hope farmers are in need of money. What better indication of farm diversification pay?

The Evil Eye
FRANCOIS DESOUMPS, who brought Gorgeous to America for a killing years ago, was supposed to be the evil eye on Georges' opponent, causing him to run into the man's falling fists. Jack Sharkey has been known, on occasion, to glare his adversary in a way that has caused him to flinch as he sat in his corner before a fight.

The boys will tell you that this is a lot of baloney, but if a similar thing is ever made for Mickey Cochrane, the lad Connie Mack calls his "adroit catcher," I am almost prepared to believe it.

Something about Cochrane's way with a ball team as he squats there behind the bat has been written once or twice or now, but day after day Cochrane adds new deeds that seem to indicate he has the enemy under what Professor Hokus-pokus would call the mystic spell.

"It Don't Hurt Much"

He chipped a bone in his ankle recently and was believed to have been laid away safely on the shelf for at least a couple of weeks. He hobbled around his apartment in Philadelphia for a day or so, then threw the crutches away and limped into New York, where his mates were engaged in an important series with the Yanks.

"It don't hurt much," he told Connie Mack. "I'm ready to work."

Meanwhile, sundry teams had been making merry with the Athletics, and the touted pitchers had been throwing like Bloomer. Cochrane, still limping, started both games of a double-header with the Yanks, made two doubles and a single out of three times at bat, caught 10 innings and put Connie's faltering fellows back on their feet again. After which the Mackmen got rough with Boston, and fought Washington right out of the league lead.

The Laugh Sinister

This gent with the two-column eyes and piercing eyes is more than a good catcher.

"He is the motor of the team," Mack once told me.

He is more than that, too, Mr. Mack. He is a grim preserver. He is outwardly what ball players call a "great kidder." He laughs and trades fibes with them when they come to bat, but you can't laugh him off when he sits back there and starts semaphoring the slabmen. He is sinister. He is baseball's heavy villain. Mr. Mack could give the game no better likeness of Desperate Desmond were he to put an astrakhan collar on the Mick and paste a set of those phoney pointed mustaches on his upper lip. He fights to the last bitter putout.

Shade spoke feelingly of the late Leo P. Flynn, his former manager. . . . A Providence theater man once offered Leo P. $45,000 for Shade's contract. . . . Flynn refused. . . . It got Dave's goat and he went on his own. . . . Dave says golf killed Flynn. . . . that he weakened himself physically with 72-hole matches for high stakes. . . . Dave and Leo P. fought like mortal enemies on the fairways, but after the game were the best of friends. . . . It was Shade, whose home was near Flynn's in New York, who taught Leo how to play golf, because he guessed Leo would make a great golfer, since he was a fine pool player. . . . Flynn finally became good enough to hold Dave pretty even, though Dave shoots around 85.

The Look That Kills

AN umpire told me the other day that Cochrane seems to take a ball game lightly and that his attitude of "it's all just in good clean fun, girls," is merely the sheep's clothing that hides the wolf.

"When a batter turns his back to the Mick," said the "umps," "and faces the pitcher, you can almost feel yourself that the eyes of the catcher are boring holes right through him that burn him up."

Mickey is a great catcher, all right. And more than that, he is a spook and a hant, and he bodes you no good, brothers.

Booze and bad booze at that, writes Charley Paddock in Collier's, has been the prime factor in what he describes as the decadence of American post-war athletics, citing the dwindling first places scored by Americans in the last three Olympics and expressing the conviction that present-day performances (in track and field especially) do not compare with those of two or three decades ago.

Good-time Charley is as far from the actual facts, it seems from this corner, as he was from finishing anywhere in the last Olympic 200 meters event at Amsterdam.

A variety of causes contributed to Yankee reverses in the Olympic games, ranging all the way from bad management and bad breaks to over-eating and over-confidence, plus the fact that world competition has become keener.

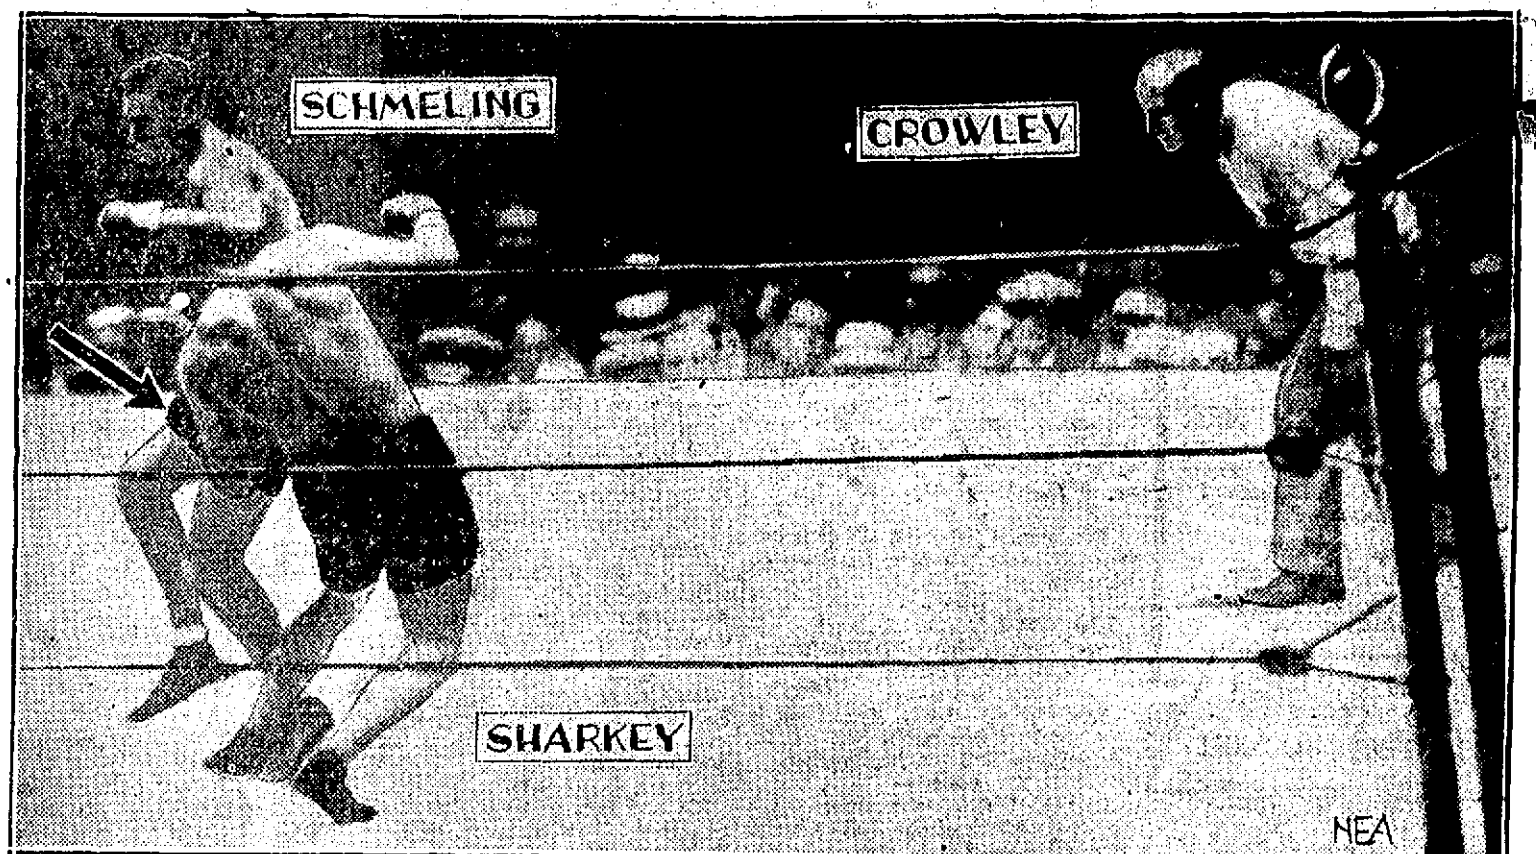

If American boys have failed to conquer athletes like Douglas Lowe, Paavo Nurmi and Willie Ritola on Olympic tracks, they hardly can be blamed, since the foot-racers have yet to appear with the ability to beat these runners at their best.

Moreover, if there is any decadence in the Yankee ability to run faster, jump higher or toss the various athletic implements farther, it has not been manifest this spring in the greatest college track and field season of all time.

With the exception of the middle distance running, in which there has unquestionably been a decline, world's records have been broken and re-broken by American athletes in almost every other event within the past few years.

The athlete who gets anywhere near the top in this age of keen competition, no matter what the sport, has no chance to keep up with the pack if he over-indulges—whether it is in food, liquor or late hours. Now and then a Jim Thorpe on the warpath, or a Maxey Rosenbloom, training on night-life, somehow manages to possess the super-endurance to burn ends of the candle but they are rarities.

The Only Photo of Foul That Beat Sharkey!

How and why Jack Sharkey lost another chance to become heavyweight champion of the world is graphically told in this striking picture, the only one taken at the instant the foul blow to Max Schmeling's body actually landed. Sharkey has sidestepped the German's leaping rush, at the same time hooking his left into Schmeling's body. Maxie's feet hardly are touching the canvas while his back is turned toward Referee Crowley, completely obstructing the official's view of the blow. An arrow points to Sharkey's fist just as it struck Schmeling below the belt. The judge who declared the blow foul sat at the ring's edge, directly to the left. This exceptional picture was snapped by a fast cameraman for Hope Star and NEA Service at the ringside.

The height of indulgence for Southern California's champion track and field team was reached at Cambridge, where in celebration of their triumph in the I. C. A. A. A. games they sat down to a big supper, topped off by a double helping of strawberry and vanilla ice cream.

And when the Trojans got to New York the following day, on route to another victory at Chicago, they went for a wild spree at Coney Island.

I happened to ask one of the star college sprinters about the attitude toward drinking.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JUDITH GRANT, beautiful Greenwich Village artist's model, tells Steyne she later met with CHARLIE MONTAGUE, known as Chummy, a beautiful girl who lost her memory seven years ago when ALAN STEYNE, her lover, abruptly disappeared, and who has been mentally affected ever since. Steyne's disappearance, Judith and HASTEN DUMONT, an artist who loves Judith, arrange for a meeting between him and Chummy, but Chummy falls utterly to recognize him. Steyne calls often to see the two girls, and expects to find that he and Chummy had never planned to be married but had merely been victims of a youthful infatuation which he had always supposed that Chummy had outgrown as easily as he did. He takes Judith to a theater party, and on their return kisses her and tells her he is in love with her, but just at that moment Judith learns that Chummy has contracted pneumonia and may not recover. She tells Steyne she loves him and dashes off to take care of the girl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI

CHUMMY came very near to death. She was so ill that one night Doctor O'Shane spent five hours in her room. She was delirious that night, and her high-pitched chatter seemed to fill the building. There was no deep, bell-like sound in that thin, restless voice.

Judy spent most of the time on the landing, and often Clara Jenks joined her. Clara could not help looking on the sunny side of things, and she made Judy laugh in the midst of her misery—which was a very good thing.

Judy did not go much into her friend's room. At first Doctor O'Shane would not let her do so, and afterward she felt a reluctance that had its roots in the memory of Alan Steyne's embrace at the foot of the stairs. She did not know how she was ever going to face Chummy again. She had thought herself sick about that night, picturing Chummy, light-headed and burning with fever, instinctively making her way to the Cafe Turc, seeking the place where was enshrined all she had ever known of happiness and love.

Before the end of the week the crisis was over, and care, nourishment, and rest were all that Chummy required.

"She had a much stronger constitution than I should have thought," said Doctor O'Shane. "When she picks up, she'll be all right again; but, Miss Judy, it's yourself I'll have to be prescribing for next. You're looking altogether too much like a snowdrop—though, sure, there's no fault to be found with the little flower itself."

Judy was a very bad housekeeper, and Clara Jenks had taken it on herself to buy food and other necessities for her. Judy handed over her purse with a sigh of relief; but she was forced to realize, in a day or two, that the luxuries and delicacies that Clara provided could not possibly have come out of that slender store.

SHE taxed Clara with it on the day after Chummy finally turned the corner and began to struggle back to life.

"Clara, you're spending your own money on us! But, no, you haven't got any, I'm sure. Clara, where are you getting money from?" A suspicion made Judy flush and frown. "Is it Mr. Steyne?" she cried excitedly. "You're not taking money from him, Clara, are you?" Clara confessed that she was. "I thought it was all right," she said, with her quaint, blunt face screwed up into an expression of contrite surprise. "He said he was an old friend."

"Oh, Judy," said Chummy's low, lazy voice, "what do you think? I dreamed that Alan had come back."

"Where have you seen him?" asked Judy's accusing voice. "Why, he came to inquire—twice. I don't know where you were—oh, yesterday you were out for a walk with Bastien! He was awfully anxious about Chummy, and I didn't like to refuse."

"How much, Clara?" "Twenty-five he gave me yesterday."

"You mustn't take any more. Promise! I'll get some money. Of course, Chummy must have everything."

"Oh, how splendid that she's getting better!" cried Clara. She proceeded to execute a weird, shuffling dance that would have brought down the house if she had performed it on a stage. Judy laughed till the tears rolled down her cheeks.

All that morning her thoughts were busy with Alan Steyne as she posed for Max Dickbreed's Spanish dancer in her vivid yellow-and-black dress, with immense scarlet poppies under the lace mantilla that covered her flaming hair. She had not seen Alan since that night. Of course, when Chummy was well again, she would have to. He must come to see Chummy. He had said he was fond of her. He must be. Everybody was. Those brief moments at the foot of the staircase had been madness. No doubt he regretted them bitterly.

Judy was an incredible optimist.

but she had at the same time no very high opinion of men. She had seen too much of them.

The dinner, the lights, the wine, the music—and those laughing eyes! Was Alan Steyne really in love with her? She did not believe it for a minute. Was she in love with him? She pulled a little shutter down over her thoughts, and would not answer that question at all.

IN the early afternoon she went to Vincent Stornaway's house. The artist had written to her, asking if she would sit for the head and shoulders of Queen Elizabeth as a young girl. He had for the moment abandoned portrait painting, and was engaged on a large historical panel for a new apartment building.

Judy could not afford to turn down any offer of work, particularly at this moment; and she could not help feeling a little flattered. Stornaway had never asked her to sit for him before. In his letter he referred to her hair and her eyebrows as suggesting to him the coloring and lineaments of the young princess. The interview that resulted was satisfactory, and it was arranged that she should go to him when Max Dickbreed could spare her.

Stornaway proved restless after her tyrannical genius. He talked to her kindly, and gave her tea. As she left his house—a large, low, many-windowed building of red brick, which suggested the country—she fed her eyes on the snowdrops that spread a field of gleaming whiteness over the lawns on either side of the path. The grounds were inclosed by a high wall that had a gate set in it, and as she opened the gate a mad met her.

She recognized him with an inward grin. She did not know why, but even the thought of him made her laugh. It was Bruce Gideon, white and heavy-jawed, with pale eyes, black hair, and peevish mouth. Chummy's description of him as Punch came back to her. He wore correct afternoon dress, which made him look old-fashioned. A shining top hat was on his big head.

At sight of Judy his lips opened in a smile which chased the peevish look from his face, but brought out its coarseness.

"Do you remember me, Miss Judy?" he asked, holding out his hand.

JUDY, glad of her new work, and still rejoicing in Chummy's escape from death, answered gladly: "Of course I remember you, Mr. Punch!"

"And here comes dog Toby!" Gideon went on, as Stornaway's terrier came trotting down the paved path. "Now we can give our show!" His little eyes rested on her glowing face with a covetous gaze that made her draw back into her shell.

"And how is your friend who called me Mr. Punch—the beautiful girl with the sad story?"

"Who told you her story?" Judy asked.

"Stornaway," replied Gideon. "He knew her, it seems."

"She has nearly died," Judy said. "And her young man has come back."

"Ah! Then I suppose there will be a happy ending?"

In her heart she meant that there must be a happy ending. Alan Steyne would recover from his madness. All would be well with Chummy.

"I wonder would you dine with me tonight?" Gideon went on.

"No, thanks."

"Will you lunch with me tomorrow?"

"No, thanks."

"I mean—I will ask anyone else you like."

"No, thanks."

"When your friend is well again—then, perhaps?"

"If it would amuse her," said Judy, with cool scorn.

"I shall make it my business, then, to amuse her."

"You are ridiculous, Mr. Punch!" She glanced at him with the same feeling that had often made her lay her little hand like a snowflake on Bastien Dumont's arm; only there was less kindness in her eyes. A single drop of water would quench Bastien's generous ardor; this man needed a garden hose. "Please let me pass!" she added.

"Au revoir, Miss Judy," he said, his eyes traveling from her shabby hat to her perfect feet.

"Goodby, Mr. Punch," she answered without a further look.

When she got back, she went into Chummy's room. The nurse had gone out for a while. Chummy was lying on her pillows in the soft luxury of convalescence. She smiled as Judy came up to her bed and bent over her.

And Judy knew at once that something tremendous had happened.

"Oh, Judy," said Chummy's low, lazy voice, "what do you think? I was dying to tell somebody. I dreamed that Alan had come back!"

'Hold Everything' Begins Three Day Engagement

Less than four months ago, "Hold Everything," the popular musical comedy success, completed its one year run at the Broadhurst Theatre in New York. Today this rollicking and tuneful production, photographed throughout in Technicolor and enhanced by several brand new songs, is one of Warner Brothers' outstanding contributions to the audible screen. It is gay, hilarious entertainment, beautifully mounted, skillfully directed and boasting a large cast of stage and screen favorites headed by Winnie Lightner of "Gold Diggers" fame, and the popular Joe E. Brown, who scored such a hit in "Sally" with Marilyn Miller.

In "Hold Everything," Winnie Lightner sings several songs, makes ardent, impetuous love to Joe E. Brown, and in general, raises a riot during every minute of the picture. Her role is even livelier than in "Gold Diggers of Broadway," which will give audiences an idea of her "mad" antics in this delightful screen adaptation of Broadway's latest musical comedy success. An Joe E. Brown, as her running mate, is all that could be desired. When he isn't dodging Winnie (and that does take up a good bit of his time) he's telling the breathless world what a great fellow he is. He also sings a few choruses with Winnie besides breaking out, from time to time, in his inimitable dances. All in all, Brown, and Miss Lightner are a barrel of fun, forming one of the funniest teams seen on the screen in ever so long.

The songs featured in this production and sung from time to time by the principals, are "When the Red Roses Get the Blues For You," "Sing a Little Theme Song," "This a Cockeyed World," and "The Cream in My Coffee." And "Hold Everything," the latter two of the original show.

Black Locusts Prove Profitable

Trees Make Finest Fence Posts Obtainable Is Opinion

WALNUT RIDGE, Ark., June 17.—black locust grove planted on the farm of L. J. Anarews near here is proving very profitable. Three quarters of an acre was planted to black locust seedlings in the spring of 1923. Last winter Mr. Andrews cut his first crop of posts. The trees had grown post size before this time, but last winter, instead of cutting one post from a tree it was possible in many cases to cut as many as three seven-foot posts from a single tree, states Chas. A. Gillett, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, Extension service.

Over 200 posts were cut out, or enough posts to fence three sides of a forty acre tract. These posts, at a value of 20 cents apiece, would cost $40. The grove was thinned out, and it is almost impossible to tell where they were removed.

It is estimated that over 2,000 posts are left, which, if valued at 20 cents apiece, would make the total value of the grove $40 in seven years, or approximately $40 a year. Black locust grows so readily when these are cut down, so that after a plantation is once started it can easily reproduce itself.

A black locust plantation is a big asset to a farm. "If one has a piece of limestone soil, or wishes to use a piece of rich soil, why not take steps now and plan to set out an acre next spring?" asks Mr. Gillett, Extension forester. The Agricultural Service of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture can furnish information concerning the planting and care of black locust seedlings.

Correct this sentence: "Yes, I really made a hole in one, but it was merely luck."

COATED TONGUE YELLOW LOOK

Often Signs of Biliousness That Indicate the Need of Black-Draught.

Austin, Texas.—"In the sixteen years of my own housekeeping, Thedford's Black-Draught has been my best stand-by in the way of medicine," says Mrs. J. M. Rich, of 1700 Holly Street, this city.

"I have found Black-Draught to be the best medicine I have ever used for the relief of colds. I have been using it in my home for years.

"My father used it also in his home and gave it to us children. Whenever we had the usual children's complaints, mother would make up a tea of Black-Draught and give us. We always felt better after taking it.

"I also give it to my children when they have colds or upset stomach. Sometimes they get feverish from biliousness. If they begin to get yellow, or their tongues are coated, I make a tea of Black-Draught and give to them in small doses. They don't mind taking it at all."

Refuse imitations! Insist on the genuine Thedford's Black-Draught which has been in use nearly a hundred years.

Illinois Has Hall Of Fame

Outstanding Daughters of State Are Honored In Statuary

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 17.—(UP)—Search for Illinois heroines of whom statues are to be placed in the rooms of the Illinois State Historical Library here reads like a fiction romance. Data was prepared on 130 women. One hundred twenty-nine figures have been made while the other is in the process of being made.

These 130 heroic Illinois women, who represent eras of the state from the days of the Indian down through the Civil War and to the present day, were selected for the honor as being the most heroic of their sex because of some mark of distinction during their life.

It may have been because of heroism in riding back a band of attacking Indians in the days of the "Covered Wagon," or it may have been for accomplishment in the world of arts.

Miss Georgia L. Osborne, state librarian, says that her latest figurine is representative of what Illinois women have accomplished in sculpture work.

The one selected for the honor to represent Illinois women in this branch is Miss Kuhnle Beveridge, a granddaughter of General John L. Beveridge, former governor of Illinois.

Miss Beveridge was born in the governor's mansion while her grandfather, General Beveridge, was governor of Illinois from January 1873 to 1877. Her sister, Ray, who gained fame as an actress, was born in Evanston, a town founded by the former governor and his friend, General Evans. They are the daughters of Philo J. and Ella M. Rutter Beveridge. Their mother married a second time and was known as the Baroness Ella von Wrede. Their childhood was spent in Dresden, Germany, while in later life they lived mostly in Paris and London.

Starting her professional career when she was 15 years of age Kuhnle first studied under the New York sculptor, William Rudolf O'Donovan, and later with Rodin in Paris. Among her famous works are: Sarah Bernhardt, Joe Jefferson, President Cleveland, John Drew, William J. Bryan, William Astor, Chanler, Buffalo Bill, Richard Croker, King Edward, King Leopold of Belgium, the Queen of Holland and a monument for Costa Rica.

With her mother, Baroness von Wrede, she made a statue called "The Veiled Venus," which won a bronze medal at the Paris Salon and was immediately bought for the museum at Leeds, England. Miss Beveridge has been married twice.

Son Is Drowned, Father Kills Self

Visits Grave of Son and Kills Self After Return Home

BLUE MOUNTAIN, Miss., June 17.—(AP)—Tom Howard, 40, well to do farmer, came home from the grave of his son early Monday and shot himself to death.

The son, J. D. Howard, 14, drowned Friday while swimming with other boys.

Monday morning Howard and his wife visited a grave with flowers. Mrs. Howard said that as he stood by the mound he said:

"I will be with you before long, son."

Howard returned to Blue Mountain where a storekeeper reported he purchased shells for his shot gun.

Soon afterward his wife heard a shot in the clothes closet.

Howard was found dead inside. He had fired the gun with his foot.
